General American Investors Relocates Its Offices To 100 Park Avenue

General American Investors has moved from 450 Lexington Avenue to 100 Park Avenue, after Aragon Construction completed a full-floor build-out to their new 35th floor location.

Aragon, working with architecture and interior design firm, James Barclay Associates, built the new offices in just 3 months. The new 7,000 square foot space for General American Investors contains perimeter offices with interior workstations, a boardroom and conference room, reception area and brand-new bathrooms, kitchen, pantry, and state-of-the-art IT room.

“General American Investors has a long-standing reputation for excellence,” says Aragon Project Manager Michael Trocchia, “and we worked diligently to reflect that excellence in every step of the project from consult to completion.”

Aragon constructed the perimeter offices using custom glass doors along with finished millwork frames. Pendant light fixtures illuminate the offices while lay-in fixtures light the interior custom-made workspaces and open office area. A boardroom and glass-enclosed conference room were constructed featuring millwork and fabric walls as well as motorized shades and AV feature wall.
